HON. WM. PATTERSON DIED AT PICTON

Picton., March 18.—Hon. William Patterson, after an illness of three months, died here at his apartments, Johnson street, this afternoon, aged seventy-four. Though he had been ill here for some weeks, Mr. Paterson was thought to be convalescing. Only on Monday last Hon. Mr. Fielding, ex-Minister of Finance, paid him a visit. He had a relapse during Tuesday evening and remained unconscious until 2.30 to-day, when he passed away.

The late Hon. Wm. Paterson will be remembered as one of the great forces in Canadian Liberalism, whose influence contributed in a marked degree to the defeat of the Conservative Government in 1896 and the Liberal regime, in the administration of which he played an important part as Minister of Customs throughout the entire period of fifteen years. His last prominent connection with the public life in which he was a conspicuous figure was to serve as a partner with Hon. W. S. Fielding in the negotiation at Washington of the reciprocity agreement, the rejection of which ended the period of Liberal administration.

Mr. Paterson was born at Hamilton, Ontario, on Sept. 19th, 1839, of Scottish parents. His parents dying from cholera in 1849, he was adopted by the late Rev. Dr. Ferrier, and removed with the Ferrier family to Caledonia, in Haldimand county. He received his business training in the house of the late Ignatius Cockshutt, a prominent Brantford manufacturer, but as early as 1853 he commenced business on his own account in partnership with the late H. B. Leeming as manufacturer of biscuits and confectionery, and on the latter's retirement in 1876 he became sole proprietor of the business, which afterwards grew to even more extensive proportions. Later on Mr. Patterson took his son into partnership under the firm name of Wm. Paterson & Son Company, Ltd.

THE LADIES MUSICAL CLUB.

The artist recital of last Friday evening given by the Ladies Musical Club in the town hall was of the highest order of musical interest. The programme was comprehensive in a much fuller significance of meaning than usual, because of the range and character of the compositions which were presented. The programme opened with the Beethoven C minor trio for piano and strings played by the Toronto trio, the personnel of which comprises Mr. Edwin Gray, piano, Mr. Milton Blankstein, violin, and Mr. Roy Webster, cello. This work is most interesting. That it was excellently played there can be no doubt and it was received with much applause by the audience. Mr. Gray, the gifted temperamental pianist,

A SUGGESTION.

Sir,—The time is at hand Canadians (the citizens of Napanee) will be called upon to contribute to funds for the purpose of erecting monuments in our town cities to commemorate the fact for 100 years a fortless bound existed between us and our neighbors so the question with us to "What shall Lennox do to show allegiance to the Prince of Wales? Now sir, our history (being a proof that whenever the spoken or noble act was needed in the time of liberty or right, the women of Lennox have always been on the firing line, and as thro generosity of our esteemed town Harvey Warner, Esq., we pretty little park, I beg to that we erect a fountain and monument therein, the figure senting the Goddess of Liberty, in one hand the white flag of peace and in the other the sword of Liberty and on the monument with the necessary inscription that our council appoint a committee to procure plans, specifications etc., and I know of several towns who will be pleased to contribute $50.00 each to the Fountain Fund.

character of the compositions which were presented. The programme opened with the Beethoven C minor trio for piano and strings played by the Toronto trio, the personnel of which comprises Mr. Edwin Gray, piano, Mr. Milton Blankstein, violin, and Mr. Roy Webster, cello. This work is most interesting. That it was excellently played there can be no doubt and it was received with much applause by the audience. Mr. Gray, the gifted temperamental pianist, achieved an emphatic success. Mr. Gray possesses an admirable technique, sympathetic—a pleasing, natural and wholly unaffected style. His reading of Chopin's E major etude and E sharp minor, Fantasie was enthusiastically received. He responded to a well merited encore with Schuman's arabesque.

Mr. Blankstein proved himself a violinist of unusual merit and created quite a furore in his solo numbers—Chopin's "Nocturne," Von Kunits, "Sarabande et Musette" and Kreisler "Caprice Viennois." These were very interesting numbers and were played by Mr. Blankstein most artistically as well as with splendid technique and musicianship.

Mr. Webster, the clever young cellist was heard in Gelterman's "Cantilena" and Poppers "Arlequin" for which an encore was demanded and Mr. Webster responded with the ever delightful "Humoresque" of Dvorak's. This young player draws a sympathetic bow, and he has an accurate and brilliant technique. He is an artist of much merit and gives great promise for the future.

Miss Margaret Hughes of Belleville, who possesses a sweet lyric soprano voice, contributed three songs—German's "Love the Peddler," Rogers, "At Parting" Corschorff's "Ferry-men Love." The received a well merited encore and responded with D'Aardelot's "Mignon." Miss Hughes is a promising young singer, who will be heard again with much pleasure. Miss Pearl Nesbitt played. Miss Hughes' accompaniments her own musicianly manner.

The Hadyn trio of four movements viz.—Allegro, Andante, Foco Adagio and Rondo, brought to a close the evening recital. The wonderful freshness of the Hadyn music and the delightful ensemble work of the Toronto trio charmed the audience and held them in perfect attention. An encore was insisted upon and the Rondo was repeated. Mr. Gray played the accompaniments for the violin and cello most efficiently.

The two artist recitals of the season 1913-14 of the club namely, Mr. Walter Howe, the famous English actor—reader in Shakespeare's great play, Hamlet given on Dec. 5, and the above mentioned recital stand out as brilliant features in the work of the club for the season. Mr. Howe's impersonation of the character "Hamlet" was truly of all the characters in the wonderful drama was a perfect delight to everyone, whether directly interested in Shakespeare's play or not. Mr. Howe's finely modulated and musical voice, excellent English diction and clear enunciation left nothing to be desired. It was the unanimous wish that Mr. Howe would visit the club in the near future.

THE EDITOR:—
The time is at hand when the citizens of Napanee will be called upon to contribute funds for the purpose of erecting monuments in our towns and to commemorate the fact that years ago a fortless boundary has been between us and our neighbors. A question with us to-day is what shall Lennox do to show her respect to the Prince of Peace? In our history (being witness) that whenever the spoken word has acted as needed in the cause of right, the men and women of Lennox have always been firing line, and as through the city of our esteemed townsman, W. Coun. Waller entered.

A communication was read from the Trent Valley Water Conservation Association suggesting that the council adopt and forward to the Association, a resolution which would indicate to the government that this corporation was in favor of any action taken in regard to water conservation. The following resolution was introduced and passed:

Moved by Reeve Denison, seconded by Coun. Carson, and resolved, that the Corporation of the Town of Napanee earnestly endorses the principles of water conservation, and urges the government to continue and enlarge on its efforts to properly conserve and handle all of the waters tributary to the Trent river, Napanee river, and similar water courses, believing it to be of the greatest interest from every standpoint, and especially from the standpoint of navigation and industrial growth.

Communications from the Canadian Municipal Journal, and the Union of Canadian Municipalities, soliciting subscriptions, were ordered filed.

Reeve Denison informed the council that recently he had torn down a boat house on his property, just west of the gas house, and for the information of the council he stated he discovered a drain which was discharging into the river, and as complaints were being continually made about oil and tar getting into the river from the gas house property, it might be just possible that this drain contributed largely to the trouble.

A resolution was passed authorizing the installation of two incandescent electric light lamps at the Disposal Works for the convenience of the caretaker, said work to be done under the supervision of the Town Property Committee.

Father Gnam Wants Damages of $50,000 From Rt. Rev. Neil McNeill.

SARNIA, Ont., March 17.—Suit for $50,000 damages for alleged breach of agreement was entered yesterday morning for trial at the spring assizes against Archbishop McNeill of Toronto, on behalf of Rev. Father P. J. Gnam of Petrolia.

As to his successor at Ottawa, this correspondent thinks the Duke of Teck will not likely accept, seeing he is due to command the First Life Guards.

Native Home of the Novel.

England is the native home of the novel, as is Normandy of the apple or Valencia of the orange. Why? That question can be answered only in a large volume or in a single word. Let us answer it in a word. Lord Redesdale has already suggested the answer to us. It is that the novel is in its nature intimate, cordial and homely and that the English mind is homely, intimate and cordial.—Anatole France in a London Address.

THE BEAM AND THE MOTE

BORDEN GOVERNMENT DOING ON LARGER SCALE THINGS WHICH GUTELIUS AND LYNCH-STAUTON CONDEMNED UNDER LAURIER ADMINISTRATION.

Precept and practice do not go hand in hand under the present government. The "sins" which Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton charged up against the Laurier Government in connection with the sub-letting of Government contracts by the main contractors and in connection with changes of contract prices without calling for new tenders, are being countenanced by the present Government under the very noses of the scandal-hunting commissioners.

Two instances of this character, much worse than anything Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton discovered to have been committed under the Liberal administration, have come to light. In the Commons on Wednesday, Hon. Dr. Reid, acting Minister of Railways, tabled official documents dealing with a change of contract prices for earth excavation in connection with the St. Malo car shops at the Quebec terminals of the National Transcontinental Railway. The contractor, Mr. Joseph Gosselin, tendered for earth excavation at 85 cents per cubic yard and the contract was signed last autumn at this figure. At the time the contract was entered into the understanding was that the ground was not frozen. But Hon. L. P. Pelletier found that there were several hundred men out of employment at Quebec this winter and that it would be politically advantageous for them to be employed on Government work. He suggested to the National Transcontinental commission that the work of excavation for the St. Malo shops should go ahead during the winter time. Contractor Gosselin was quite the rock excavation at Courtenay Bay could be done for less than one half of what the Government is paying for it. But of course Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton are very careful to point out the mote in the Liberal eye and pay no attention to the beam in the Conservative eye.

BOOMERANG SCANDAL HUNTS TRENT VALLEY CANAL INVESTIGATION HAS A "COME BACK."

The scandal hunts conducted by the Borden Government, since it assumed office, with a view to making some political capital against the late administration have all so far had a boomerang attachment. The first hunt inaugurated was headed by Hon. A. B. Morine. The chief head obtained was that of Mr. Morine himself. The search for scandal in regard to the construction of the National Transcontinental is resulting in making the investigating commissioners and the Borden Government do more "explaining" than the men whom they sought to besmirch. The report of another scandal hunt was tabled in the Commons this week, dealing with some serious irregularities by officials of the Trent Valley canal. It, too, has its boomerang attachment.

While it is shown that some of the irregularities disclosed actually existed under the late Government, there is no evidence produced to show that any Liberal minister or any official at Ottawa either connived at or condoned the offences. The local officials at Peterborough were alone culpable. But the investigating commissioner, Mr. G. Howard Ferguson, Conservative M. P. for Grenville, in making his report, could not gloss over the fact that one of the main charges of graft referred to occurred under the present Government. The first six pages of his report deal with a "rake-off" in connection with the purchase of dynamite for use in canal construction during 1912, under the administration of Hon. Frank Cochrane. Mr. Ferguson states that prior to 1912, Canal Superintendent McClellan had purchased dynamite from the Kingston Hardware Company of Peterborough. After the change of government the patronage was shifted to Daniel Cinnamon, a hardware merchant at Lindsay, and a constituent of Col. Sam Hughes. Three purchases of dynamite aggregating five tons, were made during 1912 for use at Lindsay, Col. Sam's home town. It was found that there was a very considerable shortage in supply, in comparison to the amount charged up to the Government. From the evidence taken by Mr. Ferguson it appears that while Cinnamon was nominal vendor to the tribute to an industry which sold its goods on the foreign market cheaper than on the home market.

The resolution received the same treatment as did the free wheat resolution at the hands of the Government. Premier Borden dismissed it in a ten minute speech. Every Western Conservative voted against it.

In somewhat striking contrast to these demands on behalf of the farmer was a proposal made to the House by J. J. Carrick, member for Thunder Bay on the Conservative side. The demands of the farming interests was not for more protection; they were simply for a free field and no favors. The demand of Mr. Carrick, which was backed up by many members on his own side, was that a bounty be granted to the steel industry of two cents for every unit of metallic content in ore mined and manufactured in Canada. The member for Thunder Bay admitted that there was iron, limestone and coal in abundance in Canada; that the industry enjoyed a moderate protection; and that it was already indebted to the Dominion treasury in bounties to the extent of seventeen million dollars. And yet he declared that it was in a languishing condition and needed more help.

Mr. Carrick was not told by the Government that this was the wrong time to bring up such a discussion in the House. There was no hostility evidenced by the Government to his proposal. On the contrary the Prime Minister replied with a lengthy and courteous speech in which he admired the merits of the claim; while Hon. W. T. White declared that bounties were no new thing, and that the matter was receiving the most earnest consideration of the Government.

Evidences steadily accumulate to show that the protected interests have more ready access to the ear of the Government than the farmer or the consumer. "Bounties for the interests; burdens for the farmers" is the way Dr. Clark of Red Deer summed up the situation on Wednesday last after listening to the speech of the Prime Minister.

BUILT OUT OF REVENUE.

Conservative editorial writers, pamphleteers and speakers are using the partisan Gutelius-Lynch-Staunton report to convey the impression that Canada is staggering under the enormous burden of interest charges on the N. T. R. construction cost. Hon. Dr. Reid, acting Minister of Railways, told the House of Commons the other day that of $140,562,147 actually expended on the road thus far, only $41,966,800 has been raised by loans. The rest has been met out of revenue. When revenue pays for more than two-thirds of so large a national development work of permanent character, it hardly seems to be a case of the country "staggering" under its financial load.

Ginseng In China.

Much of the American ginseng sent to China brings small prices because it shows cultivation, being smooth, round and light in color. What is wanted is the wild looking root. The central theory of the use of ginseng decoction is that it combines in itself the virtues of nature—wind, water, woods, the elements and wild nature generally; hence the gnarled, twisted wild root is the ideal, and any domesticated or cultivated variety is merely a substitute. This substitute ought to be as near like the wild as possible. If the root grows in the shape of or seems to bear some resemblance, even by severe stretch of the imagination, to some animal it has increased virtue in the trade. For this and similar reasons it is necessary that the small

Keep the Chest Wide Open and Avoid the Great White Plague.

The best way to avoid consumption is to stand up straight, according to the Bulletin of the American Medical Association. The writer says:

"The first essential in the avoidance of tuberculosis of the lungs, or consumption, is to keep the lungs strong so that if the germs are breathed in they can do no harm. One of the most important things in keeping the lungs strong is to keep the chest wide so that the lungs can be properly expanded. If the body is drooped or stooped, the shoulders are allowed to drag forward (round shoulders) or if the chest is carried forward instead of well over the shoulders the chest must be flattened, the breathing must be shallow, and the lungs, not being fully used, become weak.

"It is in this type of chest that tuberculosis usually begins. The chest is usually narrow and with drooped shoulders and with head craned forward.

"While the development of a strong, well formed chest is one of the important factors in preventing tuberculosis, it is also one of the

was not frozen. But Hon. L. P. Pelletier found that there were several hundred men out of employment at Quebec this winter and that it would politically advantageous for them to be employed on Government work. He suggested to the National Transcontinental commission that the work of excavation for the St. Malo shops should go ahead during the winter time. Contractor Gosselin was quite agreeable, but wanted, of course, a much larger price for excavating frozen earth. The Government consented, and an Order-in-Council was passed increasing the contract price from 85 cents per yard to $2.30 per cubic yard. The total increase in the cost of the work is estimated at $36,000. It is not known in the correspondence that there is any very great hurry for the St. Malo Shops, and this extra expenditure charged up to the cost of the National Transcontinental is primarily merely to give employment to the men out of work in Mr. Pelletier's district. According to Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton, this $36,000 must of course be classed as "waste." This additional cost, it may be further noticed, was incurred without even bothering to ask the consent of the Grand Trunk Pacific, the other partner to the agreement, as to what the road would cost. And this was done at the very time Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton were putting the finishing touches on their report.

Another and still more striking contrast between what Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton say the Liberal Government should have done and what the present Government is now doing is seen in connection with the $10,000,000 contract awarded to the Norton Griffiths Company at Courtenay Bay, St. John, in connection with the National Transcontinental. Railway terminals and harbor improvements there. The contract price for rock excavation agreed to by the company was $2.50 per cubic yard. That amount the company is collecting from the Government. But some time ago they sub-let the contract to the Courtenay Construction Company at $1.17 per cubic yard. According to Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton this would represent a "rake-off" of over 100 per cent. for the main contractors.

It will be remembered that in the case of sub-letting on the National Transcontinental Railway a 10 per cent. "rake-off" for the main contractors in cases of sub-letting was regarded as scandalous. Apparently the same was true of the contract at Lindsay, and a constituent of Col. Sam Hughes. Three purchases of dynamite, aggregating five tons, were made during 1912 for use at Lindsay, Col. Sam's home town. It was found that there was a very considerable shortage in supply, in comparison to the amount charged up to the Government. From the evidence taken by Mr. Ferguson it appears that while Cinnamon was nominal vendor to the Government, he merely acted as a go-between and the dynamite really came from the Kingan Company. The latter company sold to Cinnamon for 22 cents a pound and he charged the Government 27 cents a pound. Mr. Ferguson says "Cinnamon's part of the transaction merely consisted in making out an invoice, adding five cents per pound to Kingan's price, and taking this rake-off for profit for himself."

Cinnamon was the man to whom the present administration had given the patronage, doubtless at the request of Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes.

NO FAVORS FOR FARMERS.

"BOUNTIES FOR THE INTERESTS : BURDENS FOR THE FARMERS."

From the beginning of the present session the Liberal party in the House of Commons has fought for the removal of unnecessary tariff burdens and restrictions which benefit a few millionaires, at the expense of the masses of producers and consumers. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers declared, in reply to the speech from the Throne, that the first duty of the Government, in the face of present conditions, was to take action to alleviate the burdens of high prices, and high taxation, under which the people at present suffer. The amendment of the Liberal leader, was designed to give effect to that declaration.

During the debate the Opposition placed itself upon record as favoring the principle of free food, as a remedy for the steadily increasing cost of living. In this the Liberals had special consideration for the consuming classes of the Dominion. The proposal met with no sympathy from the Government side.

Later there was introduced in the House by Dr. Neely, of Humboldt, a resolution urging that wheat and wheat products be placed on the free list, in order that advantage might be taken of the standing offer of reciprocity in these commodities contained in the new United States tariff. This resolution voiced the demands of the three prairie provinces, and of organized agriculture throughout the Dominion. If given effect to, it would widen the farmer's markets, increase his returns and lead to increased production. It will be noted in this connection that the farmers declared their willingness to abandon the "protection" which their own industry at present "enjoys."

This resolution was unanimously voted down by the Government. Mr. Borden contending that the proper time for bringing up such discussion was when the budget speech was delivered.

On Wednesday last the Liberals in Parliament advanced another important step in the fight. A resolution was introduced by Mr. Knowles, of Moose Jaw, urging the abolition of the duties on agricultural implements. It was forcefully argued by Liberal members from every section of the Dominion that the industry had now reached a stage where it need fear no competition, and that the present protective duty of 17 1/2 per cent. was not justified, even on the principles of the National Policy. It was contended that one of the best means of stimulating production and of encouraging the primary industry of the Dominion was to allow the farmer to procure the tools of his trade at as low a price as possible, and without paying generally; hence the gnarled, twisted wild root is the ideal, and any domesticated or cultivated variety is merely a substitute. This substitute ought to be as near like the wild as possible. If the root grows in the shape of or seems to bear some resemblance, even by severe stretch of the imagination, to some animal it has increased virtue in the trade. For this and similar reasons it is necessary that the small head of the root joined to the rest of the root by a small neck shall remain a part of the product. Breaking off such little heads reduces the value of the root in the Chinese market by fully half, as a rule.—Chicago News.

Juvenile Financial Genius.

"Johnnie," said a prominent mine operator to his youngest the other day, "I'll give you a dollar if you'll dig up the front yard for your sister's new garden." "All right," said Johnnie thoughtfully. "But I shall have to ask for 25 per cent of the contract price in advance. Not as an evidence of good faith, but for working capital." "But—what do you mean?" "Well, you see, I guess I'll bury the quarter somewhere and tell all the boys in the neighborhood that a pirate hid some treasure round there. When they strike that quarter they'll make the dirt fly. I can tell you. In that way I can clean up about 75 per cent. In fact, I'll— "Well, what?" "In fact, I don't know but what I can also arrange so as to find that quarter myself. I'll work it just like that salted mine you were telling mamma about unloading on the street last night." And the father wept tears of joy.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Jewels of London's Lord Mayor.

The gold chain and jeweled insignia of the lord mayor of London are among the most wonderful ornaments in the world, being composed of pure gold and adorned with an enormous number of diamonds. Their value has been estimated at not less than £120,000. Every lord mayor, before he is elected, is called upon to enter into a bond for their safe custody during his term of office, and before he resigns the insignia at the close of his mayoralty they are most carefully examined by special jewelers in order to see that during the year's wear its diamonds have not been loosened in their holdings and that his successor may wear them without anxiety. No wonder that when the lord mayor is wearing all the insignia of his proud position he is a special object of attention by a special police guard.—London Saturday Journal.

Thunder.

When clouds are driven past one another by wind currents electricity of a frictional kind is produced. Lightning is caused by the passing of the electricity between the two clouds or from a cloud to the earth. As it travels it expands and drives the air in front of it. When the lightning has passed the air that was driven away returns with a rush, and it is this rush which causes the noise of thunder.—Pearson's Weekly.

ELECTRIFIED CELLULOSE

Pulling a Couple of Strips Between Fingers Changes Them.

If you will take two thin lengths of celluloid, put them in contact and suddenly and rapidly pull the two between your fingers you will find they both have become electrified on their outside surfaces, the friction of your fingers causes negative electrification, but also inner surface of the celluloid.

The strange part about this is one of the inner surfaces of the is positively charged and the other is negatively charged. If one is slightly curved during the flexing the convex one will be positively charged and the concave side will be negatively charged.

It seems, therefore, to depend whether the surface is concave whether it is convex—depressed rounded—to produce negative or positive electricity. Even the most imperceptible curvature is sufficient to expect the result. It is also possible to pull the strips of celluloid through the fingers without producing strong electrification the piece will support the other.

Even the vapor pressure of liquid is stronger at the convex surface than the concave. If electrons are considered as particles of gas dissolved solids—as they once were—or as active electricity, there will be a tendency for the electrons to flow from the convex side, which the will be left positively charged, also is in perfect accord with the researches upon electrons.

Interesting experiments can be followed by the above directions: Celluloid has peculiar properties for—New York Press.

I can prove in a moment by any other that our trains are infinitely luxurious than the trains in England. But still, and notwithstanding, the English railway service is inferior. Why? In England the train run for the people, not the people the trains.—From Theodore Dr "A Traveler at Forty."

best way to avoid consumption stand up straight, according to bulletin of the American Medical Association. The writer says:

first essential in the avoidance of tuberculosis of the lungs, or consumption, is to keep the lungs strong. If the germs are breathed they do no harm. One of the most important things in keeping the lungs is to keep the chest wide open. The lungs can be properly used, if the body is drooped or stoops or if the shoulders are allowed to drag forward (round shoulders) or if the head is bent forward instead of well back. If the shoulders the chest must be straight. The breathing must be shallow and the lungs, not being freely become weak.

LIVE WIRE VICTIMS.

Quickness In Rescuing Them From Contact Is Essential.

For his own benefit and that of his comrades the scout should know how to avoid accidents from electricity. The third rail is always dangerous, so do not touch it. Swinging wires of any kind may somewhere in their course be in contact with live wires, so they should not be touched.

A person in contact with a wire or rail carrying an electric current will transfer the current to the rescuer. Therefore he must not touch the unfortunate victim unless his own body is thoroughly insulated. The rescuer must act very promptly, for the danger to the person in contact is much increased the longer the electric current is allowed to pass through his body. If possible the rescuer should insulate himself by covering his hands with a mackintosh, rubber sheeting, several thicknesses of silk or even dry cloth. In addition, he should if possible complete his insulation by standing on a dry board, a thick piece of paper or even a dry coat. Rubber gloves and rubber shoes or boots are still safer, but they cannot usually be procured quickly.

TOOK THREE GIFTS

A Request That Surprised the Sultan Abdul Hamid.

TALE OF A BADLY USED TURK.

A Truthful Account of an Experience at the Court of the "Illuminator of the Universe" That Reads Like a Story From the Arabian Nights.

Many fantastic stories are related of Abdul Hamid, the ex-sultan of Turkey, and his court. The following, however, came to me from a reliable source, writes a contributor to Chambers' Journal, and once when I told the story in company one of my listeners told me that he personally knew it to be true. It is worthy of a place among Scheherazade's famous tales.

Not far from the sultan's palace lived a certain Ahmed Rushdi Effendi, one of the hundreds of clerks employed at the sublime porte. Ahmed's duties consisted of writing ornate official communications to provincial governors. For this he was supposed to receive a salary of 200 piasters (about $8) per month. If, however, he received this salary six times a year he thought himself lucky.

Compared to many of his colleagues in the government offices, Ahmed was in comfortable circumstances. He owned his own house, so he had no rent to pay, and he gave his leisure time to cultivating the tiny garden that supplied his family with fruit and vegetables the whole year round. Ahmed Effendi, not being ambitious, was a contented man.

In his peaceful household there was only one discordant note. The cause was a dwarf peach tree in Ahmed's garden that bore every year six or eight mammoth peaches. Early in his married life his wife dreamed that her husband would one day attain eminence and that the peaches were connected with his fortune.

Fifty times each year she urged him to take the peaches as an offering to the sultan. "We are simple people," she would say. "Such magnificent peaches are not for us. Carry them, I pray thee, to the palace and present them to the benefactor of the world." But Ahmed would reply:

"Wife, no good comes to those who have relations with the palace. I, who have always been discreet, do not wish to fall under suspicion."

But at last, after twenty years, Ahmed yielded to his wife's importunity and carried the beautiful fruit to the palace. There he entrusted the peaches to the grand chamberlain, who, knowing the sultan's fondness for fruit, promptly carried them into the presence of the Illuminator of the Universe. The sultan graciously accepted the gift and commanded Ahmed to wait until he was at liberty in order that he might himself thank the grower of such splendid fruit.

It happened that the reception room where the scribe awaited the pleasure of the sovereign was filled with a band of suspected bomb throwers, and Ahmed was presently hustled away to prison with the supposed revolutionaries. He was thoroughly confused by the rough treatment of the

CANOPIES ON THEIR HEADS.

People of Korea Wear the Largest Hats in the World.

What would you think of a hat that was so large it would safely shelter your father, mother, sisters and yourself under it should a sudden rain-storm come up? The men of Korea like these enormous hats and would not feel properly dressed without them. These hats look like great flower pots set on a round table six feet across. The crowns are nine feet in height and three inches wide, much like a chimney on a one story house. How do you suppose these large, round head coverings are kept on? Under the brim is a small, closely fitting cap held on by a padded string which ties under the ears. The material of these hats is bamboo, so finely split that it is like thread, and lastly they are varnished to keep out the sun and rain and the wind.

You know that the Korean people always wear cotton clothing, so these big hats protect them far more than our hats possibly could. In the rainy season cones of oiled paper are attached to the big bamboo head coverings in the shape of funnels, so, I sup-ned, the breathing must be shared, the lungs, not being freely become weak.

A strange part about this is that if the inner surfaces of the piece are positively charged and the other one negatively charged. If one of them is slightly curved during the friction, the convex one will be positively charged and the concave sided one will be negatively charged.

Railway Trains in England.

to prove in a moment by any traveler that our trains are infinitely more comfortable than the trains in England. Well, and notwithstanding, I say that English railway service is better.

Because it's more human; it's considerate. You aren't driven down to step lively and called at by harsh voices and made to feel you are being tolerated aboard a train that was never made for all, but for the employees of the railway. In England the trains are made for the people, not the people for the trains.—From Theodore Dreiser's Trilogy at Forty.

Rubber gloves and rubber shoes or boots are still safer, but they cannot usually be procured quickly.

If a live wire is under a person and the ground is dry it will be perfectly safe to stand on the ground and pull him off the wire with the bare hands, care being taken to touch only his clothing, and this must not be wet.

A live wire lying on a patient may be slipped off with safety with a dry board or stick. In removing the live wire from the person or the person from the wire do this with one motion, as rocking him to and fro on the wire will increase shock and burn.

A live wire may be safely cut with an ax or hatchet with dry wooden handle. The electric current may be short circuited by dropping a crowbar or poker on the wire. This must be dropped on the side from which the current is coming and not on the farther side, as the latter will not short circuit the current before it has passed through the body of the person in contact. Drop the metal bar; do not place it on the wire or you will then be made a part of the short circuit and receive the current of electricity through your body.—From "Boy Scouts of America."

LINCOLN AND THE DRAMA.

His Liking For Tragedy and His Curious Choice In "Hamlet."

Lincoln liked the drama. Perhaps if he had not liked it so much he would have lived many years longer, since otherwise he would hardly have put himself in Wilkes Booth's way on that fatal night in April, 1865. But he never pretended to any knowledge or connoisseurship whatever. Most of his life had been passed in a country town—and at a time when few great actors ever appeared in such small places as Springfield, Ill.

In a sale of the autographs, prints and playbills which belonged to the late Douglas Taylor there is a copy of a letter from Lincoln to James H. Hackett, dated Washington, Aug. 17, 1863, afterward printed in this form for private circulation, which contains the following:

I have seen very little of the drama. Some of Shakespeare's plays I have never read, while others I have gone over perhaps as frequently as any unprofessional reader. Among the latter are "Lear," "Richard III.," "Henry VIII.," "Hamlet" and especially "Macbeth." I think the soliloquy in "Hamlet" commencing, "Oh, my offense is rank," surpasses "To be or not to be."

No one but the modest Lincoln would have gone out of his way to tell a Shakespearean scholar that he had never read some of Shakespeare's plays. It is interesting to see that Lincoln's preference fixed itself upon the tragedies and the most serious of the histories. His choice of "Oh, my offense is rank" over "To be or not to be" seems rather strange. The soliloquy is the king's desperate bemoaning of his perfidy and cruelty in murdering his brother.—New York Mail.

ed the gift and commanded Ahmed to wait until he was at liberty in order that he might himself thank the grower of such splendid fruit.

It happened that the reception room where the scribe awaited the pleasure of the sovereign was filled with a band of suspected bomb throwers, and Ahmed was presently hustled away to prison with the supposed revolutionaries. He was thoroughly confused by the rough treatment of the guards and could only stammer: "I am the man who brought the peaches! I am the man who brought the peaches!"

In prison he soon became known as "the man of the peaches" and was looked upon as a harmless lunatic. After many months the suspected bomb throwers, including Ahmed, were brought before the criminal court. He told his story to the judge and asked that the grand chamberlain be called to confirm his words. The judge granted his request and was greatly surprised when the dignitary told of the arrival of Ahmed at the palace some months ago and of his mysterious disappearance. The chamberlain took the afflicted scribe to his own suit in the palace and went to explain matters to the sultan.

The sultan, sincerely sorry for the unlucky mistake, commanded the chamberlain to promise Ahmed that any wish of his should be fulfilled. Ahmed replied that he would accept not one, but three gifts, and that he must name them to the sultan personally. The sultan was much concerned and ordered the scribe ushered into his private study.

"Sire," said Ahmed, "I ask for a hatchet, the sum of 200 plasters and a copy of the Koran."

"Your desire is granted," answered the sultan, "on condition that you explain the meaning of your singular request."

"Sire," replied our hero, "with the 200 plasters I shall obtain a divorce from my wife, the original cause of all my trouble; with the hatchet I intend to cut down my peach tree, and upon the Koran I wish to swear an oath never to enter the palace gates again so long as I live."

The masterpiece of Apelles was the Venus Anadyomene, "Venus Rising From the Sea." The falling drops of water from her hair form a transparent silver veil over her form. ## The Ungrateful Cuckoo.

To hear the cuckoo's cheery note you might think he had the clearest conscience in the world. He can have neither memory nor moral sense or he would not carry it off so gaily. The most disreputable of birds, as a rule, are guilty of nothing worse than peccadilloes. The jackdaw will steal for the mere fun of the thing, for he can make no possible use of plate or jewelry. Sparrows are, of course, notorious thieves, but they rank no higher in crime than the sneaking pickpockets. But the cuckoo, so to speak, is a murderer from his cradle. He violates the sanctity of a hospitable hearth. His first victims are his own foster brothers, and before he tries his wings on the first flight he is imbrued in fraternal blood, like any Amurath or Bajazet.—London Saturday Review.

Believed Himself Invisible.

The first Lord Lytton was certainly daft. One morning while he was entertaining a large company at his country seat the guests were assembled at breakfast in the great hall when their host came in in an old dressing gown, poured out a cup of tea and disappeared without uttering a word to any one. Arthur Russell expressed his surprise to his next neighbor, who said:

"He believes himself to be invisible."

And, sure enough, in a little time he appeared in his usual dress and saluted his friends as if he had not seen them since the previous night.

CHIEF DOINGS IN THE LEGISLATURE

LEVANTURAL RESIGNS ON TUESDAY WITHOUT ANY FUSS, WITHOUT ANY SPEECH.

The House adjourned on Monday out of respect to the memory of the late Sir George Ross, after Hon. J. J. Foy, Mr. Rowell and other members had given their appreciations of the former Prime Minister of Ontario.

Mr. Hanna made his third statement in regard to the visit of W. K. Snider, Provincial License Inspector, to the Counties of Peel, Huron and Welland in the week preceding the votes on the Canada Temperance Act. The fact that Mr. Hanna has had to make so many statements in regard to this seems to show that they are not received with satisfaction. Indications point to this Snider affair as one of the most important subjects for the Legislature, and much more will undoubtedly be heard of it in the following weeks. It is admitted by Mr. Hanna that this Provincial License Inspector visited the three counties and advised against the passing of the Act. Mr. Hanna, however, infers that Mr. Snider went only to the officers of law, whereas the change is that he visited prominent Conservatives and told them that it would embarrass the Government if the Canada Temperance Act carried. Mr. Hanna has dodged this issue but the affair is by no means closed. There are many indications of great public interest and it is felt that nothing but a thorough investigation will be satisfactory.

Hon. W. H. Hearst introduced a bill providing for a reward of $25,000 to

Any person in Ontario may choose any ONE of the experiments for 1914 and apply for the same. The material will be furnished in the order in which the applications are received, while the supply lasts. It might be well for each applicant to make a second choice, for fear the first could not be granted. All material will be furnished entirely free of charge to each applicant, and the produce will, of course, become the property of the person who conducts the experiment. Each person applying for an experiment should write his name and address very carefully, and should give the name of the County in which he lives.

Antiquity of Spectacles.

The ordinary magnifying spectacles with convex lenses came into use some time near the end of the thirteenth century. Their invention is generally attributed to two Italians, Armati and Spina. As a matter of fact at this time old people in Germany were wearing glasses. According to G. H. Oliver, writing in the British Medical Journal, the first use of concave lenses was of much later date, probably not until the middle of the sixteenth century. It appears that at first the doctors were down on glasses because they interfered with the sale of lotions for weak eyes. Their first mention by a doctor is credited to Bernard Gordon, professor in Montpellier, who informed the world that they were unnecessary, thanks to his wonderful lotions. In these early days their use was limited for many reasons. They were clumsy and ill shaped, making the wearer conspicuous and subjecting him to ridicule oftentimes of far from gentle type. And above all they were very expensive. For example, Dr. Oliver says, "At the end of the sixteenth century the price per pair, expressed in terms of present day value, was from $50 to $100."

Hon. W. H. Hearst introduced a bill providing for a reward of $25,000 to the first person who discovers radium in Ontario in sufficient quantity for commercial extraction.

In concluding the debate on the Budget, Mr. Rowell estimated the net deficit of the Province last year at $3,450,000, severely arraigned the Provincial Treasurer for not presenting a financial statement which was fair, charged a gross abuse of authority on the part of the Government, in securing loans under the Northern Ontario Grant Act and then using the money for other purposes, which amounted to a mis-use of trust funds, and declared that if the treasurer of any private company conducted business like the Provincial Treasurer has done during the last year, he would be would be called to account.

Occidental Ways.

Life in Korea is so entirely different from the life led in Western lands that the social usages seems to Occidentals quite topsy-turvy. In writing of mission work in that remote part of the world, the Rev. Dr. William E. Griffith speaks of matters that have to do with the morals of the people as well as with the family life.

After having been so long fitted to his environment, as hand is to glove, the native was so used in habit to a Korean domicile that to get inside a foreigner's house was like entering a new world.

As for the rustic, he was like a bull in a china shop, or a lunatic at large, and created consternation in his host, and more particularly in his hostess, while he put himself in imminent danger. Only by exercise of great caution could he get through a room without running against a door, upsetting a chair, or flattening his nose against a mirror which he imagined gave him a glimpse of another apartment, into which he attempted to pass.

In training servants to get into harmony with their new environment, the house-mother must virtually set up a college, or at least a kindergarten, of domestic science. In time, however, even a mere man in Korea discerns the difference between a door and a window, a floor-cloth and a napkin. He even appraises critically the quality of scrubbing, washing and drinking water. Nevertheless, at first, cases of native mothers and sons drinking the starch water, indigo bluing and all, were known. Happily, results so far as I have heard, were not fatal.

The native women seemed at first sadly defective in that marvellous intuition that we ascribe to the daughters of Eve. Except in matters vitally feminine, they were no more acute than the males, in learning the fitness of things according to the strange civilization of Western lands. They did not actually sit down on red-hot iron but cases of rapid rising from the suddenly felt heat of stove lids, mistaken for seats, have been known to occur.

The daughters of the land who were accustomed to sit on the floor in their own houses were especially confused when they first encountered chairs. The mistress hardly knew whether to laugh, to cry, or to scold, when a bevy of white-clad visitors perched themselves upon the high backs of the odd things called chairs, with their stockinged feet resting on the seats!

MIX MAPS AND MEALS.

An Easy Way of Studying Geography While You Eat.

In the dining room of one family there hang two large colored maps, one of the world, the other of the state in which they live.

The parents and children are forming the habit of talking during meals about what they read or hear, of places and events outside the visible horizon. And whenever any unfamiliar place is mentioned one of the children immediately leaves the table long enough to locate it on the map. "It is near such and such a town or river or mountain," "That is where so and so lives," or "Such a thing happened there," is the information usually added to the first statement.

They do not limit their conversation to bookish things, but speak naturally about whatever they are interested in, turning to the maps as one looks at a railroad guide when traveling, to place themselves. In this way bits of knowledge are linked together, and as sight knowledge requires so much less mental effort than ear knowledge it is more fun.

Besides, the maps, hanging low and in a good light, make a splendid rainy day game for the two younger children, aged eight and ten. The mother, sitting near with her sewing, gives them "hard ones to find" (names of more or less obscurity), and they keep score as to which gets the most "firsts," calling twenty the game.

No wonder the whole world seems like one big picture to this family, and geography but a play.—Woman's Home Companion.

EARTH TO BECOME MAN'S PARADISE

How this Will be Done Is the Gospel Message.

The Earthly Paradise—Lost Through Disobedience—Reclaimed at Calvary—Messiah's Great Work—Restoration of Paradise—"The Story of the Cross"—Importance of Character Development.

PASTOR RUSSELL

March 15.—Pastor Russell today depicted the beauties of Paradise so beautifully presented in his free Photo-Drama. His text was, "I will make the place of My feet glorious."—Isaiah 60:13.

Paradise is another name for Eden, began the Pastor. It was lost through the disobedience of our first parents, but our gracious Creator's promise is that it shall be restored. Eventually the whole earth shall become the Paradise of God. The Scriptures assure us that Heaven is God's Throne and the earth His footstool, and that in due time He will make the place of His feet—His footstool—glorious. How this change will be accomplished is the Gospel Message.

The Pastor then briefly reviewed the story of man's fall from Divine favor—the loss of Paradise. He next showed that God's Promise to Abraham, that in his Seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed, includes the thought of man's full restoration to Divine favor, as before man came under the death sentence. Thus the Jews, he declared, hoped that Messiah would come and constitute their nation the earthly Kingdom of God, and re-establish Paradise, with Palestine as its centre, from which the Divine Law would extend to all mankind, gradually bringing the race back into harmony with God.

"The Garden of the Lord."

The Pastor explained that the dying thief's request was based upon the Jewish hope of becoming the Divine instrument to establish righteousness in the earth and thus to convert it into the Paradise of God. Our Lord's reply was that his request would be granted. Paradise has not yet been established, the speaker declared; for God's Kingdom has not yet come. It delays until the work for the Church shall be accomplished.

The Church, the Pastor showed, constitutes a new nation, Spiritual Israel, selected since Pentecost from all nations. These will, with the Redeemer, be the Kingdom class, after the foreordained number shall have been glorified on the spirit plane, by the First Resurrection.

Next the Pastor demonstrated from Scripture that Paradise is used to designate two different conditions; one earthly, the other Heavenly. The earthly Paradise is for man's blessing, after the race has been restored to perfection by obedience during the Millennial Age. The Heavenly Paradise is a figurative expression, applying to the glorious position which

LEAPING FOR THE FIRE NET.

Safe Jumps of Eight or Nine Stories Have Been Made.

At a recent Fifty-sixth street tenement fire in New York that resulted in more of a smoke alarm than a blaze a man and his wife were seen to get out on the ledge of a fifth story window. The firemen told them to wait a moment, that there might be no need to jump. The man cried that they were suffocating and must jump.

The firemen stretched the net and shouted for them to poise themselves properly and jump one at a time. But even while the firemen were shouting the instructions the couple kissed each other, locked arms and leaped. They came down straight and sure as a plummet right into the net. They rebounded about fifteen feet and fell in the net again in a sitting posture, still embraced.

The firemen let them gently down to the sidewalk. They still sat there looking at each other incredulously. Then they were told there was not even a good fire to justify their jump. It had all been smoke from a smouldering lot of rags and other rubbish. The man and wife heard the news with expressions of wonder, thankfulness and condemnation of their silliness.

Jumps of eight and nine stories without injuries have been recorded. The makeup of the jumper is what counts. The firemen have to be prepared for all kinds. Sometimes they have to shift a few inches quickly because of the bad judgment of distance shown by the jumper. But in most cases the leap to the net saves life.—New York Sun.

A Little Paint Badly Applied.

The play "L'Homme de Destin" was taken from the stage when its triumph was at the zenith. One evening Napoleon, accompanied by his friend Ducot, went in disguise to the Porte St. Martin theater, where the piece was being performed. Eugene Chevalier appearing as the man of destiny. They bought a box, but had hardly entered it when the emperor broke forth in violent execrations against the "fool managers." It seemed that the decorators had left in the box pots of oil and paint, and into these the emperor had stepped. Wild with rage, he rushed from the house and to make matters worse was recognized in the lobby. No paper mentioned the incident, but by order of the emperor the play was never produced again, and Chevalier never appeared again as the man of destiny—and all on account of a little paint badly applied.

Theory and Practice.

Little Beatrice was taking piano lessons and learning at the same time something of theory. Like many other children, she disliked practicing her finger exercises. One day her mother, who was working in an upstairs room, noticed a sudden lull in the playing. She looked down and saw Beatrice sitting perfectly motionless.

"Beatrice, why don't you practice?" she called down sharply.

"I am practicing, mother," replied the child with perfect self assurance. "I'm practicing my theory." — New York Post.

Next the Pastor demonstrated from Scripture that Paradise is used to designate two different conditions; one earthly, the other Heavenly. The earthly Paradise is for man's blessing, after the race has been restored to perfection by obedience during the Millennial Age. The Heavenly Paradise is a figurative expression, applying to the glorious position which God has in reservation for the Church. We read in the Revelation that the overcomers will "eat of the tree of life, in the midst of the Paradise of God."

The World's Regeneration.

The Pastor then briefly discussed the Book of Revelation, which he declares is a grandly beautiful and symbolic picture of the Gospel and Millennial Ages, showing Paradise stored, with the glorified Church as its centre, or capital. The future state will all be Paradise.

The speaker quoted many passages from the Prophets, describing the coming changes which will constitute the earth a Paradise. Then both physically and morally lame shall learn to walk; both physically and mentally blind eyes shall be opened. They shall learn to walk in the paths of righteousness and to see the goodness of God. The willing and obedient shall eat of the good of the land, but evil-doers shall be cut off in the Second Death.

Redemption Through Christ.

Next the Pastor discussed the story of redemption. After Adam had lost the earthly Paradise, through disobedience to his Creator's just command, his posterity as well as himself came under the death sentence. Because a perfect man had sinned, the Redeemer must be a perfect man, who must die in order to effect the sinner's release from death. As Adam's fall involved his posterity and their Paradise home, so our Redeemer will restore Adam's family—the world—to all that was lost.

This work of restoration, the Pastor believes, will be accomplished by Messiah at His Second Coming. But sin will always be objectionable to God. The Divine sentence is that no sinner may have everlasting life. Hence the offer of Divine Grace is merely that whoever will may have Divine assistance out of sin and death conditions. The wilfully disobedient will have no part in life everlasting. Their portion will be the alternative of Paradise—the Second Death.

Then the Pastor spoke upon the importance of right character-development. Every good and noble deed of the present life works out character which will be helpful in the future life. Correspondingly, every violation of conscience and principle impairs character. This also will affect the future life, and retard progress toward life everlasting.

MONTREAL, March 16.—A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for cattle today and prices advanced 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, owing to a smaller supply, especially of choice stock, coming forward. A few full loads of choice steers changed hands at $8.25; picked small lots at $8.40, and choice butchers' cows brought as high as $7 per cwt. Hogs showed a decline of from 20c to 30c per cwt., owing to increased supplies coming forward. Ontario selected stock sold at $9.50 and Montbana at $9.50, while sows brought $8.50 to $8.80, and stags $4.75 to $4.90 per cwt., weighed off cars. The trade in sheep and lambs was very quiet, but prices ruled firm, on account of the continued small offerings, but the demand for calves was fairly good and some extra choice veals brought as high as $25 each.

MESSIAH TO ASK FOR THE HEATHEN

The Redeemer Has Not Yet Asked
For His Inheritance.

World-Wide Dominion Promised Messiah—Conversion of the Heathen Shortly To Be Accomplished—Messiah's Conquest of the Nations—Arrows of Truth Will Reach Men's Hearts.

PASTOR RUSSELL

March 8.—Pastor Russell's discourse to-day related to the fulfillment of Jesus' prayer, "Ask of Me, and I shall give Thee the heathen for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession." — Psalm 2:8.

The Pastor declared that his text, taken from a Messianic Psalm, represents Messiah as making known to His people the Heavenly Father's decree rewarding Him for His faithfulness as our Redeemer and assuring Him of His exaltation to the Kingdom, with power to subject all things to the Father's will. This dominion has not yet come to Messiah. The Prince of Darkness still reigns.

The reason for this, the Pastor explained, is that our Redeemer has not yet asked for His Inheritance. Knowing the Divine Plan, our Lord was content to wait until the due time, in harmony with another feature of that plan which must precede the setting up of the Messianic Kingdom. That feature is the selection of the Church, the Bride of Christ.

The Pastor next showed that meantime the heathen have been suffering no loss. Born in sin, condemned to death, all of Adam's family have had experiences with sin and death, and have been going down into the tomb—the prison-house of death, there to remain until the Redeemer at His Second Advent shall call them from their graves. Then a fair trial will be given them, to determine their worthiness or unworthiness of life everlasting. It was part of the Divine purpose, he explained, that the earth should be filled with people; and hence the bringing forth of a progeny is part of the Divine will. The few short years of the present life, with experience of sin and death conditions, will be supplemented by the grand opportunities of the next Age.

Converting the World.

Then the Pastor contrasted God's method of dealing with the world in general with that which He adopted for the Church during this Age. In the next Age, force will be used, not merely moral suasion. Mankind will be compelled to be obedient. Numerous Scriptures were quoted to sustain this position. Among these was Psalm 45.

This Psalm, the Pastor declared, is descriptive of Messiah's triumph during the Millennial Age—a picture of the conversion of the heathen. The arrows of Truth which will go forth to the whole world will reach the hearts of men and will smite them

Some Mushroom.

Epicures who love mushrooms will long for a time in the Austrian Tyrol, where real mushrooms grow. A traveler writing of the region says: Bordering the road that led up the mountain were Italian chestnut trees, so large that it took from three to five of us to span the trunks of most of them. Under one of these one evening I saw crouching what I took to be a small, dark gray kitten. Stooping, I found that it was not a kitten, but a mushroom. Our good peasant neighbor, hurrying toward me, begged that I would not disturb it, saying that she depended on this every year. After a few days of rain, what had seemed a kitten now looked a stately cat, and when it reached the weight of six pounds it was gathered and eaten.

erous Scriptures were quoted to sustain this position. Among these was Psalm 45.

This Psalm, the Pastor declared, is descriptive of Messiah's triumph during the Millennial Age—a picture of the conversion of the heathen. The arrows of Truth which will go forth to the whole world will reach the hearts of men and will smite them down. To illustrate the thought the speaker reminded his audience that when on Pentecost St. Peter preached that the Jews had crucified the Son of God, his hearers were "cut to the heart"—pierced with the lance of Truth.

The Pastor holds that this work of dealing with the world will begin with the generation living at the time of the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom. Ultimately it will include all that are in their graves, in the reverse order of that in which they entered the tomb. The last will come forth first—"every man in his own order"—or class.

Referring to the Second Psalm, the Pastor applied it to the time of our Lord's Second Coming, when the Church will have entered into His glory as "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife," symbolically pictured as the New Jerusalem. From that Heavenly City, according to St. John, the Water of Life will flow freely, and whosoever will may partake. Meantime, the speaker declared, before the nations will be ready for that blessing, they must pass through a period of deep humiliation—"a Time of Trouble such as was not since there was a nation."

The extent to which the nations will suffer at that time will depend largely upon their own attitude, the Pastor believes. He bases his opinion upon the verse following his text. Those that accept Messiah's Rule heartily will be correspondingly saved from the breaking process. Hence the exhortation, "Kiss the Son, lest He be angry, and ye perish from the way."

The Glorious Outcome.

The Pastor concluded with a brief summary of God's Plan of salvation. First He has selected The Christ—Jesus the Head, and the Church His Body—through whom He purposes to bless all the families of the earth. This blessing will consist of a knowledge of Himself, His glorious character, and also of an opportunity for life everlasting. The Scriptures, he declared, do not authorize us to claim universal salvation, but distinctly speak of some who will die the Second Death. These will have demonstrated fully that they are not in harmony with the principles of righteousness, and therefore unworthy of life everlasting.

Shattered His Idol.

Swinburne's admiration for the scenery inspired the walk which every morning, wet or fine, he took across Putney common. It led also to visitors to see the poet walk.

One modest admirer, says the London Chronicle, traveled far to catch a glimpse of Swinburne in the flesh and, baving read of the poet's habits, visited the hostelry at which he called each morning in passing. There sat the literary demigod reading the Pink 'Un, a flashy, low grade paper. But worse followed.

Said the pilgrim to the girl behind the bar. "I suppose you know that is Swinburne, the great poet?" Came the answer: "Yes; I've heard so. But he isn't much good to us. He only drinks beer."

THE CRUSH OF WORLDS.

It Will Come When the Solar System Falls Into the Sun.

The whole of the present solar system is ultimately to fall into the sun, causing an explosion that may result in a new solar system. Such is the theory put forward in the Journal of Natural Science by Professor Philip Fauth, a well known astronomer, whose reputation has rested principally upon his researches into conditions on the moon.

The novel feature of Dr. Fauth's theory is that it is based upon the supposition that a great part of the known solar system, including especially the planets Jupiter, Uranus and Saturn, are not composed of mineral matter at all, but are tremendous masses of ice, or balls of ice surrounding a mineral kernel. Furthermore, he declares, a part of what is now known as the Milky way is not mineral or gaseous, but "a ring of ice dust," masses of particles of ice suspended in space, the outer planets receiving a constant addition to their ice mass from this source.

Professor Fauth declares that the world already at some remote period has had a similar experience, resulting in the death of nearly all animate nature, and that all species of life as we know it have arisen since then. Eventually the planets swinging through their narrowing orbits will fall into the sun, causing a new explosion and perhaps the birth of a new solar system, but for thousands of years before that time all life, either on earth or elsewhere, will have disappeared.—New York Sun.

"What nonsense!" she exclaimed.

We Know They're Good

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, in addition to other ingredients, contain Pepsin and Bismuth, two great digestive aids used by the entire medical profession. They soothe the inflamed stomach, check the heartburn and distress, stimulate a healthy secretion of the gastric juice, aid in rapid and comfortable digestion of the food and help to quickly convert it into rich red blood, and thereby into flesh, bone and muscle. They relieve stomach distress promptly, and, used regularly for a short time, tend to restore the stomach to a comfortable, easy-acting, healthy state. They aid greatly to promote regular bowel action.

Delays Are Dangerous

Don't neglect indigestion, for it frequently leads to all sorts of ills and complications. The pain and discomfort is not the most unfortunate part. The fact that when the stomach is not acting right, the material needed to repair the wastes that are constantly taking place in the body is not being given to the blood either in the proper condition or fast enough is far more serious. Nothing will cause more trouble than an unhealthy stomach. The blues, debility, lack of strength and energy, constipation, biliousness, headaches and scores of other serious ailments result from the failure of the stomach to properly do its work.

"Thank God, it wasn't my face!" he cried. "Are your trunks checked?"

"Yes, this afternoon. I have nothing but the bags. You have the tickets? Then let us get aboard. I just couldn't get here earlier," she whispered guiltily. "We had to say goodbye, you know. Poor old Roxy! How he hated it! I sent Burton and O'Brien on ahead of me. My sister brought them here in her carriage, and I dare say they're aboard and abed by this time. You didn't see them? But, of course, you wouldn't know my maids. How stupid of me! Don't be alarmed. They have their instructions, Roxbury. Doesn't it sound odd to you?"

Brock was icy cold with apprehension as they walked down the line of wagons lit in the wake of the baggage bearers. Mrs. Medcroft was as self-possessed and as degenerate as he was ill at ease and awkward. As they ascended the steps of the carriage she turned back to him and said with the most malicious twinkle in her eyes:

"I'm not a bit nervous."

"But you've been married so much longer than I have," he responded.

Then came the disposition of the bags and parcels. She calmly directed the porters to put the overflow into the upper berth. The garde came up to remonstrate in his most rapid French.

"But where is m'sieur to sleep if the bags go up there?" he argued.

Mrs. Medcroft dropped her toilet bag and turned to Brock with startled eyes. Her lips parted. He was standing in the passage, his two bags at his feet, an aroused gleam in his eyes. A deep flush overspread his face. An expression of utter rout succeeded the buoyancy of the moment before.

"Really," she murmured and could go no further. The loveliest pucker came into her face. Brock waved the garde aside.

"It's all right," he explained. "I shan't occupy the—I mean, I'll take one of the other compartments." As the garde opened his lips to protest she drew Brock inside the compartment and closed the door. Mrs. Medcroft was agitated.

"Oh, what a wretched contretemps!" she cried in despair. "Roxy has made a frightful mess of it, after all. He has not taken a compartment for you, and blackly out into the whizzing night. The predicament had come upon him so suddenly that he had not until now found the opportunity to analyze it in its entirety. The worst that could come of it, of course, was the poor comfort of a night in a chair. He knew that it was a train of sleeping coaches. Ah! He suddenly remembered the luggage van! As a last resort he might find lodging among the trunks.

And then, too, there was something irritating in the suspicion that she had laughed as if it were a huge joke. Perhaps even now she was doubled up in her narrow couch stifling the giggle that would not be suppressed.

When the garde came back with the lugubrious information that nothing, positively nothing, was to be had it is painful to record that Brock swore in a manner which won the deepest respect of the trainman.

"At 4 o'clock in the morning, m'sieur, an old gentleman and his wife will get out at Strassburg, their destination. They are in this carriage, and you may take their compartment if m'sieur will not object to sleeping in a room just vacated by two mourners who today buried a beloved son in Paris. They have kept all of the flowers in their!"

"Four o'clock! Good Lord, what am I to do till then?" groaned Brock, glaring with unmanly hatred at the door of the Medcroft compartment.

"Perhaps madame may be willing to take the upper"—ventured the guard timorously, but Brock checked him with a peremptory gesture. He proposed, instead, the luggage van, whereupon the garde burst into a psalm of utter dejection. It was against the rules, irrevocably.

"Then I guess I'll have to sit here all night," said Brock faintly. He was forgetting his English.

"If m'sieur will not occupy his own bed, yes," said the guard, shrugging his shoulders and washing his hands of the whole incomprehensible affair. "M'sieur will then be up to receive the customs officers at the frontier. Perhaps he will give me the keys to madame's trunks so that she may not be disturbed."

"Ask her for 'em yourself," growled Brock, after one dazed moment of dismay.

The hours crawled slowly by. He paced the length of the wriggling corridor a hundred times back and forth; he sat on every window seat in the carriage; he nodded and dozed and groaned and laughed at himself in the deepest derision all through the dismal night. Daylight came at 4. He saw the sun rise for the first time in his life. He neither enjoyed nor appreciated the novelty. Never had he witnessed anything so mournfully depressing as the first gray tints that crept up to mock him in his vigil. Never had he seen anything so ghastly as the soft red glow that suffused the morning sky.

"I'll sleep all day if I ever get into that d-d bed," he said to himself, bitterly wistful.

The customs officers had eyed him suspiciously at the border. They had evidently been told of his strange madness in refusing to occupy the berth he had paid for. Their examination of his effects was more thorough than usual. It may have entered their heads that he was standing guard over the repose of a fair accomplice. They asked so many embarrassing and disconcerting questions that he was devoutly relieved when they passed on, still sus-manner. He turned red about the ears and began to wonder fiercely why his eggs and coffee were so slow in coming. Then, to his consternation, the young women, plainly of the serving class, bore down upon him with abashed smiles. He noticed for the first time that one of them was carrying a very small child in her arms. As she came alongside, grinning sheepishly, she extended the small one toward the astounded Brock, and said in excellent old English:

"Good morning, Mr. Medcroft." Then, with a rare inspiration, "Baby, kiss papa—come, now."

She pushed the infant almost into Brock's face. He did not observe that it was a beautiful child and that it had a look of terror in its eyes. He only knew that he was glaring wildly at the fiendish nurse, the truth slowly beating its way into his be-addled brain. For a full minute he stared as if petrified. Then, administering a sickly grin, he sought to bring his wits up to the requirements of the extraordinary situation. He lifted his hand and mumbled: "Come, Raggles! I haven't a biscuit, but here, have a roll, do. Give me a—a kiss!" He added the last in most heroic surrender.

The nurse and the maid stared hard at him. The baby turned in affright to cling closely to the neck of the former.

"Good Lord, sir," whispered the nurse, with a nervous glance about her, "this ain't Raggles, sir. This is a baby."

"Do you think I'm blind, madam?" whispered he savagely. "I can see it's a baby, but I didn't know there was to be one. Its father didn't mention it to me."

"It's a wise father that knows his own child," said the nurse, with prompt sarcasm.

"I think they should have prepared me for this," growled he. "Is it supposed to be mine? Does—does Mrs. Medcroft know about it?"

"You mean about the baby, sir? Of course she does. It's hers. Please don't look so odd, sir. My word, sir, I didn't know you didn't know it, sir! I wasn't told, was I, O'Brien? There, sir, you see! Mrs. Medcroft said I was to bring Tootles in to you, sir. She said—"

"Tootles?" murmured Brock. "Tootles and Raggles. I dare say there's a distinction without much of a difference. Are you Burton?"

"Yes, Mr. Medcroft. The nurse. Won't you take baby for a minute, sir? Just to get acquainted and for appearance's sake." She whispered the well-meant entreaty. Brock, now well into the spirit of the situation, obligingly extended his arms. The baby set up a lusty howl of aversion.

"For God's sake, take him back to his mother!" groaned Brock hastily. "He doesn't like strangers! Take him away!"

"It isn't a he, sir," whispered the maid as the nurse prepared to beat a hasty retreat with the Medcroft offspring. "It's a her, sir."

Brock's face was a study in perplexity as they hurried from the car.

"By George!" he muttered. "What next?"

That which did come next was even more amazing than the unexpected advent of Tootles. He barely had recovered his equanimity—with his coffee—when a young lady entered the car. That of itself was not much to speak struggled to his feet, amazement in his face.

"Good morning, Roxbury," she said in the most impersonal of greeter smiles deepened as the blaze increased in his face. In the casual matter of fact manner she appropriated the chair across the from him. "Please sit down, Rox."

He sat down abruptly. For a tense, abashed moment they searched into each other's eyes. "Are you Raggles?" he asked lightly.

"You poor man!" she cried. "Raggles is Edith's French."

Has no one told you of the past? She half whispered this. He bore her at that very moment, circumstance well worth remembering.

"No one has told me of you, for matter," he apologized, thrilling at a delight such as he had never before. "Would you mind whispering to me just who you are? Am I supposed to be your father—or what?"

"It is all so delightfully casual!" she said. "I daresay they tell you that you are a man of letters. Didn't they mention me in that way at all?" She pouted very prettily.

"No, they ignored you and R and Tootles. Are there any more of my family that I haven't met?"

"You see, we got to the station a bit ahead of Edith. That's how I happened to miss meeting us. You were there, however. I recognize you by your clothes. You seemed very happy. Oh, I forgot! You will know who I am. Well, I am your sister-in-law."

CHAPTER IV.

"I am Constance."

SHE ordered coffee and toast. He sat there figuring. When the waiter departed he leaned forward and said frankly:

"You'll pardon me, I'm sure, can't understand how I was so sighted as to marry your sister."

"Well, you see, you didn't catch a glimpse of me until after you married," she rallied. "I was in the Sacred Heart convent, you remember."

"Ah, that explains the oversight. I am considered an unusually dignified person. Let me see: I'm a Miss Fowler, didn't I?"

"Yes, Roxbury—four years ago. London, at St. George's, in H. square, at 4 o'clock on a Saturday. Didn't they tell you all that?"

"I don't think they said as much about it being 4 o'clock. I'm going to know the awful details, believe me! Thanks! Do you know I decided were an American the instant you in the door," he went on, quite relevantly.

"How clever of you, Roxbury! Oh, I say, Miss Fowler, I'm not an ass as I look—really I'm not trying to look like—"

"Sh! If you want me to tell you are not the ass you think you are, be careful what you say. Remember that, Roxbury?"

He drew a long breath. "Oh, Connie, I'd much rather be plain to you."

"Please don't forget that I am this for my sister, not for myself, in any manner of means," she said. He flushed painfully, conscious rebuke.

"It's all right," he explained. "I shan't occupy the—I mean, I'll take one of the other compartments." As the garde opened his lips to protest she drew Brock inside the compartment and closed the door. Mrs. Medcroft was agitated.

"Oh, what a wretched contretemps!" she cried in despair. "Roxbury has made a frightful mess of it, after all. He has not taken a compartment for you. I'm—I'm afraid you'll have to take this one and—and let me go in with!"

"Nonsense!" he broke in. "Nothing of the sort! I'll find a bed, never fear. I daresay there's plenty of room on the train. You shan't sleep with the servants. And don't lie awake blaming poor old Rox. He's lonesome and unhappy, and he!"

"But he has a place to sleep," she lamented. "I'm so sorry, Mr. Brock! It's perfectly horrid, and I'm I'm dreadfully afraid you won't be able to get a berth. Roxbury tried yesterday for a lower for himself."

"And he couldn't get one?"

"No, Mr. Brock. But I'll ask the maids to give up their!"

"Please, please don't worry, and please don't call me Mr. Brock. I hate the name. Good night! Now, don't think about me. I'll be all right. You'll find me as gay as a lark in the morning."

He did not give her a chance for further protest, but darted out of the compartment. As he closed the door he had the disquieting impression that she was sitting upon the edge of her berth, giggling hysterically.

CHAPTER III.

The Sister-in-law.

THE garde listened to his demand for a separate compartment with the dejection of a capable French attendant who is ever ready with joint commiseration and obduracy. No, he was compelled to inform monsieur the American (to the dismay of the pseudo Englishman) it would be impossible to arrange for another compartment. The train was crowded to its capacity. Many had been turned away. No, a louis would not be of avail. The deepest grief and anguish filled his soul to see the predicament of monsieur, but there was no relief.

Brock's miserable affectation of the English drawl soon gave way to sharp, emphatic Americanisms. It was after 8 o'clock and the train was well under way. The street lamps were getting fewer and fewer, and the soft, fresh air of the suburbs was rushing through the window.

"But, hang it all, I can't sit up all night!" growled Brock in exasperated quality.

"M'sieur forgets that he has a berth. It is not the fault of the compagnie that he is without a bed. Did not m'sieur look the compartment himself? Tres bien!"

As the result of strong persuasion the garde consented to make "the grand tour" of the train de luxe in search of a berth. It goes without saying that he was intensely mystified by Brock's incautious remark that he would be satisfied with "an upper if he couldn't do any better." For the life of him monsieur the garde could not comprehend the situation. He went away, shaking his head and looking at the tickets, as much as to say that an American is never satisfied—not even with the best.

Brock lowered a window seat in the passage and sat down, staring blankly at the border. He had evidently been told of his strange madness in refusing to occupy the berth he had paid for. Their examination of his effects was more thorough than usual. It may have entered their heads that he was standing guard over the repose of a fair accomplice. They asked so many embarrassing and disconcerting questions that he was devoutly relieved when they passed on, still suspicious.

The train was late, and at 5 o'clock he was desperately combating an impulse to leave it at Strassburg, find lodging in a hotel and then, refreshed, set out for London to have it out with the malevolent Medcroft. The disembarking of the venerable mourners, however, restored him to a degree of his peace of mind. After all, he reviewed, it would be cowardly and base to desert a trusting wife. He pictured her asleep and securely confident in his stanchness. No, he would have it out with Medcroft at some later day.

He was congratulating himself on the acquisition of a bed—although it might possess the odor of a bed of tuberoses—when all of his pleasant calculations were upset by the appearance of a German burgher and his family. It was then that he learned that these people had booked the compartment from Strassburg to Munich.

Brock resumed his window seat and despondently awaited the call to breakfast. He fell sound asleep with his monocle in position, nor did it matter to him that his hat dropped through the window and went scuttling off across the green Rhenish fields. When next he looked at his watch it was 8 o'clock. A small boy was standing at the end of the passage staring wide eyed at him. Two little girls came piling, half dressed, from a compartment, evidently in response to the youngster's whispered command to hurry out and see the funny man. Brock scowled darkly, and the trio darted swiftly into the compartment.

He dragged his stiff legs into the dining car at Stuttgart and shoved them under a table. The car was quite empty. As he was staring blankly at the menu the conducteur from his car hurried in with the word that madam would not breakfast until 9. She was still very sleepy. Would M. Medcroft be good enough to order her coffee and rolls brought to her compartment at that hour? And would he mind seeing that the maid saw to it that Raggles surely had his biscuit and a walk at the next station?

"Raggles?" queried Brock, passing his hand over his brow. The other shrugged his shoulders and looked askance. "Oh, yes; I understand," murmured the puzzled one, recovering himself. For the next ten minutes he wondered who Raggles could be.

He had eaten his strawberries and was waiting for the eggs and coffee, resentfully eying the early risers who were now coming in for their coffee and rolls. They had slept. He could tell by the complacent manner in which their hair was combed and by the interest they found in the scenery which he had come, by tedious familiarity, to loathe and scorn.

The actions of two young women near the door attracted his attention. From their actions he suddenly gathered that they were discussing him—and in a more or less facetious fashion at that. They whispered and looked shy and grinned in a most disconcerting

Brock's face was a study in perplexity as they hurried from the car.

That which did come next was even more amazing than the unexpected advent of Tootles. He barely had recovered his equanimity—with his coffee—when a young lady entered the car. That of itself was not much to speak of, but what followed was something that not even he could have dreamed of if he had been given the chance. He afterward recalled in some distress of mind that his second quick glance at the newcomer developed into little less than a rude stare of admiration. Small wonder, let it be advanced in his defense.

She was astoundingly fair to look upon—dazzlingly, it might be said, with some support to the adjective. Moreover, she was looking directly into his eyes from her unstable position near the door. What was more, a shy, even mischievous, smile crept into her face as her glance caught his. Never had he seen a more exquisite face than hers. Never had he looked upon a more perfect picture of grace and loveliness and—aye—smartness. She was smiling with unmistakable friendliness and recognition, and yet he could have sworn he had not seen her before in his life. As if he could have forgotten such a face! A sudden sense of enchantment swept over him, indescribable yet delicious.

She was coming toward him, still smiling shyly, her lips parted, as if she were breathing quickly from fear or another emotion. He set down his coffee cup without regard to taste or direction, his gaze fixed upon the trim, slender figure in blue. He now saw that her dark eyes were filled with a soft seriousness that belied her brave smile. A delicate pink had come into her clear, high bred face. The hesitancy of the gentlewoman enveloped her with a mantle that shielded her from any suspicion of boldness. Brock

He drew a long breath. "Oh Connie, I'd much rather be plain to you."

"Please don't forget that I am this for my sister, not for in any manner of means," she said. He flushed painfully, conscious rebuke.

"Please overlook my faults, time being," he said. "I'll do You see, I've been rather over the sense of my own importance not used to being the head of establishment. It has dazed me, many things have happened since I left the Gare de l'night." He was considerate in referring to his unhappy modeling. "For instance, I've lost my head." He might be that, but that would have sound commonplace and earthy.

"One does, you know, when his identity," she said sympathetically. "Edith says you are ripping that sort of thing," she went riedly, in perfect mimicry. "You very highly recommended as a sister-in-law."

"Are you to be with us until of the play?"

"Yes. The Rodneys are my not Edith's. Katherine Rodney the convent with me. We see deal of each other. I'm sure like her. Everybody falls in love with her."

"How very amiable of you to it," he protested gallantly. "I shall enjoy falling in love, reminds me that I've never been sister-in-law. They're very nice. It's odd that Medcroft didn't about you. Would you mind giving a bit of general information yourself—and, may I say, at family in general? It ma handy."

"I feel as though I had known for years," she said, frankly in his gaze. She leaned forward bows on the table, her chin hands. "I'm merely Edith's. We live in Paris—that is, father I'm three years younger than Of course you know how a wife is, so we won't dwell upon You don't? Then I'll demand her. "It's all right, then," she said. Her rarest and most considerate. "Well, Edith asked me to London for the season. questions."

"You are not obliged to answer them Roxbury," she said. The flush had deepened in her cheek. It convinced him that she was in love—and engag ed. He experienced a queer sinking of the heart. "You can say that you don't know, if any one should be so rude as to ask." Suddenly she caught her breath and stared at him in a sor of panic. "Heavens!" she whispered

"Heavens, you're not, by any chance engaged, are you?"

the toast poised half way to her lips
"you're not, by any chance, engaged are you? Appalling thought!"

He laughed delightedly. "People won't ask about me, my dear Con stance. I'm already married, you know. But if any one should ask you're not obliged to answer."

She looked troubled and uncertain
"You may be really married, after all," she speculated. "Who knows? Poor old Roxbury wouldn't have had the tact to inquire."

"I'm a henpecked bachelor, believe me."

For the next quarter of an hour they chatted in the liveliest, most inconse quential fashion, getting on excellent terms with each other and arriving at a fair sense of appreciation of what lay ahead of them in the shape of peril and adventure.

She was the most delightful person he had ever met as well as being the most beautiful. There was a sprightly, ever growing air of self reliance about her that charmed and reassured him
She possessed the capacity for divining the sane and the ridiculous with splen did discrimination. Moreover, she could jest and be serious with an im partial intelligence that gratified his vanity without in the least inspiring the suspicion that she was merely clev er. He became blissfully imbued with the idea that she had surprised herself by the discovery that he was really quite attractive. In fact, he was quite sincerely pleased with himself—for which he may be pardoned if one stops to think how reasonable a woman of

ly. "Has it not occurred to you that Tootles will be pretty—er—much of a nuisance when it comes to mountai climbing?" He felt his way carefully in saying this.

"Oh, dear me, Roxbury! Would you have left the poor little darling at home—in all that dreadful heat?"

"I'm sure I couldn't have been blam ed for leaving her at home," he pro tested. "She didn't exist until half an hour ago. Heavens, how they do spring up!"

The remainder of Brock's day was spent in getting acquainted with his family, or, rather, his menage. There were habits and foibles, demands and restrictions that he had to adapt him self to with unvarying benignity. He made a friend of Raggles without half trying. Dogs always took to him, he admitted modestly. Tootles was less vulnerable. She howled consistently at each of his first half dozen ad vances. His courage began to wane with shocking rapidity. His next half hearted advances were in reality in glorious retreats. Spurred on by the sustaining Constance, he stood by his guns and at last was gratified to see faint signs of surrender. By midday he had conquered. Tootles permitted him to carry her up and down the sta tion platform (she was too young to realize the risk she ran). Edith and Constance, with the beaming nurse and O'Brien, applauded warmly when he returned from his first promenade, bearing Tootles and proudly heeled by Raggles. Fond mothers in the crowd of hurrying travelers found time to look upon him and smile, as if to say, "What a nice man!" He could almost hear them saying it, which no doubt accounted for the intense ruddiness of his cheeks.

My Valentines.

Grandma and I made valentines—
I painted, and she drew the lines.
A herd of sheep turned out bright red.
I meant to make them white instead!
She said 'twas just the setting sun
That cast a glow on every one.
A flock of geese I meant for gray
Are navy blue, as plain as day!
But grandma said 'twas twilight grim
When they flew home, so they looked dim.

So when I try with all my might Grandma can always make things right.

THE USEFUL MULE.

The mule is the most tireless worker of all draft animals.

The mule eats less than a horse, but does more work on his feed.

The feet of the mule stand hard roads better than those of a horse.

Mules are ready for work younger than horses. They are able to endure as much at two years as a colt will at three or four.

Mules are just as gentle as horses if they have not been spoiled in the breaking.

A mule will bring from $150 to $250 when he is full grown, if he is big and strong.

Every man who handles horses should have the fundamental gift of common sense, says the Farm Journal. A young, highly bred, trotting bred mare has been working on a farm for two years with an aged horse of lighter weight. The young mare has fretted and fumed, always half a length ahead of the old horse. Recently the man handling the team changed to open bridles. At once the young mare fell into her proper place, accommodating herself to the older horse. She could see what was going on and seemed to realize what was expected of her.

Beef Cattle Ration.

A ration of shelled corn, cottonseed meal, oat, straw and silage fattened the Indiana station cattle quicker and cheaper than did a ration of shelled corn, cottonseed meal, clover hay and corn stover. Silage is cheaper and better than clover.

DAIRY CATTLE AS A HOG FARM ADJUNCT

The handling of a few good dairy cows makes a splendid side line to go with the hog business, says the Kansas Farmer. Since a large amount of skim milk is a very important item in handling hogs the Jersey would not be as satisfactory a dairy animal as the Holstein from the viewpoint of the writer. It would seem that it would be desirable to secure the largest amount of milk possible from a comparatively small number of animals. The use of dual purpose cows for this purpose would mean that more cows would have to be milked, to get the same amount of milk, and a third line of business would be introduced on the farm—namely, the handling and disposing of beef animals.

Pure bred cows will, of course, cost two or three times as much as high grade cows and perhaps merely from the standpoint of milk production would not be much if any more profit-

The winter quarters of a ram be such that he can keep dry overhead and under foot. At time, the more fresh air the Even an open shed will serve entirely dry. A pen should not be used that is less than feet square, and if it is larger s

Holstein cows continue to make good at the pail and in butter production. According to the Advanced Register, nineteen cows of this breed have produced 1,000 pounds or more of butter in 365 days. Records of 271 cows recently accepted to enter the Holstein-Friesian Advanced Register, of which over half were heifers with first or second calves, show that they produced in seven consecutive days 100,788 pounds of milk containing 3,475 pounds of butter fat. This is an average of 3.45 per cent of fat. Dingle DeKol Princess, here shown, is a pure bred Holstein.

able than carefully selected high grade animals. When it comes to the disposition of the surplus the registered animals will command higher prices than grades. This is especially true as regards the male calves. There is a strong demand for good dairy stock, even grade cows bringing comparatively high prices. There will be little difficulty in disposing of heifers from a well selected dairy herd, even though this herd be high grade only. Of course a high class registered sire must be owned or available, even if the cows of the herd are not registered.

If the labor of the farm can be so adjusted as to properly handle a few carefully selected dairy bred animals it would seem that the adding of this project to the well established hog business of the farm might be especially desirable from the standpoint of securing larger returns from the farming operations.

the better. This will give the opportunity to exercise and with him in good, vigorous condition.

During the summer months, the ram is allowed to run on pasture; he does not need grain, but in the winter, if you expect to keep him in vigorous condition, he must be supplied with grain at least a month before the breeding season.

A mixture of two parts oats and one part bran has given unusually results in some of the larger flocks in the west. This ration does not produce fat, but does keep up the condition of the ram.

It is impossible to suggest the amount to be fed, for this can be determined by watching the condition and studying his condition.

Moisture Contents of Butter

Sixteen per cent moisture in butter, the federal standard, causes unfortunate conditions through its element, according to the annual report of the secretary of the treasury says it has increased the work of officers in the field and in the administrative office without appreciable gain and at the same time has in hardships upon many who produce and sold butter afterward found to contain abnormal moisture. The treasury does not advocate any change in the law, yet apparently has little for it.

Concrete Adopted as Road Standard

WAYNE COUNTY, MICHIGAN. WHERE nearly one hundred miles of Concrete Roads have been built in the past six years, during which time nearly every method of road construction has been tested, now comes out flat-footed and adopts concrete as the road standard.

The story is best told in the following paragraph which has been taken from the latest report of the Board of County Road Commissioners of Wayne County, Michigan.

"With the completion of Plymouth Road, we have abandoned every other form of construction and have adopted concrete as our standard. We feel that our experience of the past six years warrants us in arriving at this determination, based on its general satisfactoriness and its annual cost as compared with other forms of construction. In addition to the economy in hauling, the pleasure in driving and touring, and the increase in land valuation, the concrete roads of Wayne County have been the means of bringing tens of thousands of dollars to this locality".

Concrete roads will benefit any locality proportionately as they have benefited Wayne County, Michigan.

The fullest detailed information about concrete roads will be sent to anyone interested, without cost or obligation. Address:

If the labor of the farm can be so adjusted as to properly handle a few carefully selected dairy bred animals it would seem that the adding of this project to the well established hog business of the farm might be especially desirable from the standpoint of securing larger returns from the farming operations.

Sweet Clover Liked by Stock.

Only a dozen years ago and on many farms sweet clover was fought tooth and nail whenever a few plants of this "weed" showed their heads. Now on many farms throughout the country sweet clover is proving just the thing to grow on dry, barren knolls, gullied hillsides, rocky, ledgy fields, and on tillable lands is valuable as a soil improver to inoculate and enrich the soil for alfalfa. As these experiments go on the truth becomes evident to the experimenters that cattle, horses, sheep, hogs and poultry only need to get an occasional taste of sweet clover in order to acquire a decided liking for it. It's like onion to the human palate. Once the tangy taste of sweet clover is established among stock there is a chorus of neighs, "moos," "baas," grunts and cackles for it.—Farm and Fireside.

Feeding Dry Cows.

During the eight or ten weeks that cows go dry and are not milking their food should be chiefly roughage. A daily allowance of two pounds of bran or oats or a mixture of two parts each of bran and oats and one part of linseed meal or cornmeal makes a proper feed for a cow near calving. Some roots, cabbage, pumpkins or squashes are also very good. Highly carbonaceous roughage, such as straw and cornstalks, is not good at this particular time. Such feeds, with cold water, cold drafts or lying out at night on damp or frozen ground, are the chief causes of caked udder or garget.

Tankage For Pork Making.

Tankage is becoming more and more popular as a nitrogenous supplement in pork making. Its value is no longer doubted. At the Ohio experiment station Professor Carmichael placed a hundred pound pig with each two steers being fed corn. The pigs found the full feed of corn in the droppings from the steers. One-half the pigs were fed, in addition to the corn, one-third pound each of tankage per day. The increased gains over the pigs fed no tankage amounted to 162 pounds for each 100 pounds of tankage fed. At present prices of hogs this means a big profit on tankage fed.

Test the Dairy Cow.

The only certain way to find out what sort of cows we have is to test them. Sometimes the results are very disappointing and we may wish we had not done it, but in the end it is greatly to our advantage.

Exclusive to the Last.

An instance of exclusiveness maintained under difficulties is reported from the ladies' cabin of an Atlantic liner. All were sick except one lady and a cat, which wandered uneasily about. The lady ventured to stroke the cat, remarking, "Poor pussy." The cat was inclined to respond and elevated its tail in token of good will, when from a neighboring berth came in choking tones the words, "Excuse me, that is a private cat!"

hardships upon many who produce and sold butter afterward found to contain abnormal moisture. The secretary does not advocate any change the law, yet apparently has little for it.

How a Little Girl Made a Valentine For Her Papa.

GAVE HIM A GLAD SURPRISE.

Novel and Pretty Idea of a Bright Little Lass—Origin of St. Valentine Customs—Anecdote of Abraham Lincoln, Great War President.

This is the story of what a girl named May did last St. Valentine's day. When she went to breakfast that morning she found a valentine beside her plate. It was from her papa, who had gone to business before May arose from bed. Here is what her papa said in rhyme:

MAY'S VALENTINE TO PAPA.

Here's to my little maid,
Whom I love well.
All her sweet, winsome ways
I cannot tell.

I am her sweetheart true,
And she is mine.
She is the girl I choose
My valentine.

Of course May was delighted and planned a surprise for papa. After much thought she hit upon an idea.

She made a great heart out of white paper, and when her father entered the door that evening she thrust her head through the paper heart and said, "Here is your valentine!" You may be sure her father was pleased with such a pretty valentine.

St. Valentine's Day.

Of all our festal days that of St. Valentine is perhaps the one about which the least is known. Not even historians agree as to its origin. It may surprise you somewhat to learn that there were two St. Valentines, and on the church calendar their births and deeds are now celebrated the same day.

But how these two saints could ever have been associated with the customs now in vogue on their day is the despair of historians, for they were austere men who could not possibly have been one bit concerned with the sending and receiving of love freighted messages, much less the "comic" ones which have in late years become so large a part of the exchange of St. Valentine greetings.

The first of these two saints was a bishop of the church in Greece. He is said to have healed the son of a rhetorician, named Croton, who was seriously ill.

The second St. Valentine was one of the popes or bishops of Rome in the early days of the Claudian persecution. He, too, effected a miraculous cure, for while in prison he restored the sight of his keeper's daughter. Despite that, alas, he was finally executed.

Riddles.

Why are crockery ware dealers unlike all other shopkeepers? Because it won't do for them to crack up their goods.

Why is swearing like an ill fitting coat? Because it's a bad habit.

Tom went out, his dog with him. He went not before, behind nor on one side of him. Then where did he go? On the other side.

Why must chimney sweeping be a very agreeable business? Because it suits (soots) every one who tries it.

In what color should a secret be kept? Inviolable (in violet).

What is always behind time? The back of a clock.

Which is the more, six dozen dozen or half a dozen dozen? Six dozen dozen are seventy-two dozen, but a half a dozen dozen are six dozen.

A farmer had a duck in front of two ducks, a duck behind two ducks and a duck between two ducks. How many ducks were there? Three.

Lincoln's Quick Wit.

Many anecdotes about President Lincoln have been told and written. The following is characteristic:

One day Mr. Lincoln and a number of men were discussing how long a man's legs should be. One man said so long, and another said a different length. Finally they asked Mr. Lincoln.

"Well," he said, "I haven't thought much about it, but I think a man's legs ought to be long enough to reach the floor."

"A man has a poor chance of living and enjoying life when he cannot eat. That was what was wrong with me. Loss of appetite and indigestion was brought on by Constipation. I have had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered constantly. For the last couple of years, I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. I am sure that "Fruit-a-tives" have helped me greatly. By following the diet rules and taking "Fruit-a-tives" according to directions, any person with dyspepsia will get benefit".

Mean Man.

Edwards—So you think your next door neighbor is mean? Matchell—Of course I think he is mean. Wouldn't you think him mean if he killed his rooster, which had wakened you and kept you awake every morning for two years, the very night before you wanted to catch a 2:10 a. m. train?—Judge.

A Possible Reason.

St. Patrick's Concert.

The ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Napanee, held their annual St. Patrick's Concert and tea in their school rooms on Tuesday evening, March 17th. A most enjoyable programme was presented. A goodly number were present and all expressed themselves as well pleased. The net proceeds were over $50.00. Among those taking part the bouncing "McSorley Twins," Messrs. Daly and McGregor rendered two fine old Irish songs in grand style—and judging from their card, will be heard from again. Mr. Alexander also gave two or three Irish songs in "Rale ould style," Mrs. L. M. Brooks and Mrs. J. L. Robinson excelled themselves in two beautiful Irish songs, and last though not least, Miss Margaret McConachie, one of our promising young Soloists, sang very sweetly two numbers, mouth organ selections, several acts, recitations and addresses concluded the programme.

Latest designs in hanging lamps, hall lamps, stand lamps, and fancy lamp chimneys. Be sure you see them and get our prices before buying. At the Medical Hall—Fred L. Hooper.

Lailey-Grange.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander W. Grange was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday morning, March 14th, when their daughter, Grace Isobel, was united in marriage to Mr. Oswald C. Lailey, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. Sellery, of Trinity church. The bride was handsomely gowned in white duchesse satin, with bodice and minaret of shadow lace. The train was caught with orange blossoms and a coronet of the same, bridal flowers secured the veil. She carried a beautiful shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Constance Grange, who acted as her sister's bridesmaid, wore a very becoming gown of pale green crepe de chene, the bodice and tunic edged with sable fur, heading a flounce of silver sequin lace. Her bouquet was of exquisite sunset roses. Mr. Alexander Davidson, of Toronto, acted as best man, and Miss Luella Hall played the wedding march. Mr. and Mrs. Lailey left on the 1.17 p.m., train for the west, a large gathering of friends being at the depot to see them off. The travelling suit was of Prussian blue broadcloth, pussy willow silk blouse, and she wore a smart black matting hat with tulle mount.

A REAL NERVE AND BODY- BUILDING MEDICINE.

We believe Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is the best remedy made for toning the nerves, enriching the blood, building up wasted tissues, renewing health, strength and energy—the best medicine you can use if you are rundown, tired-out, nervous and debilitated, no matter what the cause. It doesn't depend for its good effect upon alcohol or habit-forming drugs, because it contains none. It may not make you feel better in a few hours, but it will make you feel better, we are sure, just as soon as the tonic and food properties it contains have a chance to get into the blood and through the blood, into the rest of the system. Pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites have long been endorsed by successful physicians, but here for the first time, they are combined into one preparation which, as a nerve-food and a builder of strength and health, we believe has no equal.

If you don't feel well, begin taking Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion to-day, and build your health and strengthen your system against more serious illness.
To convalescents, old people, puny children and all others who are weak, run-down or ailing, we offer Rexall with the personal promise, that if it doesn't make you well and strong again, it will cost you nothing. If we didn't have the utmost faith in it, we wouldn't offer it with this guarantee, nor even recommend it to you. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us,
$1.00. Wallace's Drug Store, Limited.

Nose and Throat, and fitting glasses,

FREE DRAINAGE SURVEYS.

Farmers! Have you a field on your place that is too "wet, cold and sour?"
Drainage will reclaim it and make it one of the best fields on the farm.

Drainage does four things. First it removes the surplus water and makes it possible to cultivate and seed about three weeks earlier in the spring than on same land when undrained.
Secondly it makes the land from ten to fifteen degrees warmer than if not drained, and this warmth germinates the seed properly and gives a good stand of grain. Thirdly, it lets plenty of air down to the roots of the plants, which is necessary for satisfactory growth. Fourthly, it makes the soil more porous, and this in turn causes the soil to store up more water for the use of the crops in time of drouth.

Frequently the increase of crop in one year pays for the drainage, and seldom or never does it take longer than three years, so that drainage pays from 33 per cent. to 100 per cent.
per annum on the money invested.

Have you difficulties in drainage?
The Department of Physics of the Ontario Agricultural College will assist you on application. They will make you a complete survey of the area to be drained, or run a single line of drain, and when done furnish you with a finished map showing location of drains, grades, sizes of tile, etc.,—a detailed guide for the thorough drainage of the land in question. No charge is made for the services of these drainage advisers, nor for the maps, only the applicant pays the travelling expenses in connection with his survey, amounting usually to not more than a couple of dollars.

Drop a card to the Department of Physics, O. A. C. Guelph, for the regular application form.
